Patient and public involvement videos

Videos are available on the RDS NW website that aim to help you involve patient and the public in the design of your research proposal. The “Patient and public involvement (PPI) common challenges” video provides information on areas including: finding funding for PPI activities, paying members of the public for PPI activities, locating and identifying members of the public for PPI activities, training for PPI activities and representativeness.

We also have a video available that provides guidance on our PPI bursary scheme. This video covers the topics: why the bursary scheme exists, who can apply, when to apply, what costs are covered, the application process and the evaluation of the scheme.

To view these videos please visit the PPI videos page on the RDS NW website.

We also have a number of videos available from RDS NW events, which will shortly include our Health Services and Delivery Research and Public Health Research seminar. Visit our event archive page to view the event videos.
