NIHR Public Health Research Programme – online RDS event – 28 April 2021

Do you have an idea for a public health research project?

Are you thinking of applying for research funding from the NIHR Public Health Research (PHR) Programme?

If “yes”, then register for a half day session hosted by NIHR Research Design Service (RDS) to inform researchers about the PHR Programme.

There is also an opportunity to meet with one of our advisers briefly in the afternoon or if you would like to request free advice and support directly with RDS NW then please complete our advice request form.

More information about the event and registration is available here.

Nursing and Midwifery Research Careers Advisory Service

This service aims to help aspiring clinical nurses and midwives to advance their research careers. Experienced advisers, based in your region, will provide you with tailored advice to help you develop your research career.

The service is being piloted in three regions in England – North West, East Midlands and the South East.

That Co-production Podcast!

Research Design Service South East (RDS SE), in partnership with the National Institute for Health Research (NIHR) Centre for Engagement and Dissemination, have launched a podcast series: ‘That Co-production Podcast!’

The intention of the podcasts is to increase the accessibility of discussion, debate and issues related to co-production, including, what is the difference between Co-production and Public Involvement in research.
